Together, we can save a life

The Oldham County Red Cross is holding a dinner to raise money for its food bank Tuesday, August 10 at Glen Oaks Country Club. The dining adventure will be orchestrated by the club's executive chef, John Railey.

"We're going to have a lot of fun in the kitchen," says Chef Railey. "We're going to create an exciting meal from pantry staples. It's the kind of creative challenge I really enjoy."

The Oldham County Red Cross food bank, like others around the country, has seen an increase in demand for its services as the economy has faltered. It has provided food for 1,236 Oldham residents this year, while maintaining a significant reserve of food for distribution in Oldham disasters like floods, tornadoes, or house fires.

"The role we play is not to permanently support people," says Rick Bissmeyer of OCRC. "It's to give a helping hand in a time of crisis. We're seeing more of that kind of thing in this tough economy, and our resources are stretched."
